*A Message FromJACK P. CALARESO, Ph.D.*PRESIDENT OF ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE

Michael Macioce

“Service is one of our founding values and it is one for which

Dear Friends,

This issue of SJC Magazine provides a wide range of information about the College — its people, programs and values. SJC's commitment to service and its centennial anniversary are the two central and interconnected themes of this issue. And this is only right, considering that St. Joseph's College has been dedicated to service throughout its 100-year history. Service is one of our founding values and it is one for which we remain committed.

As I reflected on what to share in this letter, I recalled an experience I had during my first few months at SJC. My wife Rose had volunteered to organize and lead a group of students to serve breakfast and assist in the food pantry every week at St. John's Bread and Life in Brooklyn. I was able to participate in this service project on a few occasions and was impressed by the energy and enthusiasm of our students.

As we neared the end of our shift one morning, I was chatting with two SJC seniors who were great students, active leaders and inspiring people. I asked them what was best about their SJC experience. Without hesitation, they both said, “Service activities.” They had both volunteered during the College's Hurricane Sandy relief efforts. And they each spoke eloquently about how special it was to participate in the St. John's Bread and Life program.

It was clear they appreciated their educational experience, as well as the dedication of our faculty and staff. In fact, the two volunteers are now in graduate school and doing well, in large measure because of the education they received at SJC.

Their selfless response and passion for helping others demonstrated what we have known about St. Joseph's throughout its history. Our students develop habits of the heart that lead to lives of compassion and service. And this is part of what we honor and celebrate in the centennial.

During my own college years, I was required to read St. Augustine. I must admit that I sometimes found his texts challenging, but always enlightening. I recall that he wrote, “What does love look like? It has the hands to help others. It has the feet to hasten to the poor and needy. It has eyes to see misery and want. It has the ears to hear the sighs and sorrows of men (and women). That is what love looks like.”

(The Rule of Saint Augustine)

As we celebrate a century of Josephite education, we continue to see evidence of SJC's commitment to its core values. Excellence is our goal. Service is our way of life.

Thank you for your abiding commitment to St. Joseph's College. I hope you will actively join in the centennial celebration, while continuing to represent SJC in your communities through your acts of service and your love of others.

Sincerely,

Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D.

Celebrating 50 Years

Biology professor Carol Hayes '61, Ph.D., commemorates half a century at SJC

By David Henne

Carol Hayes

Where were you when Carol Hayes '61, Ph.D., started working at SJC? Protesting the war in Vietnam? Filling up your tank for 31 cents a gallon? Or were you just a glimmer in your mother's eye?

As you probably know, this year marks the centennial of St. Joseph's College. Dwarfed by that number is Dr. Hayes, who has only been employed as a faculty member of the Department of Biology for a measly 50 years.

After serving as the biology chair for 25 years from 1975-2001, Dr. Hayes now teaches several classes a semester and devotes time to advising her undergraduate students. She keeps regular office hours in Burns Hall, where she proudly displays a commemorative book given to her by her colleagues in fall 2015.

Inside the hefty tome are pages upon pages of personal letters thanking Dr. Hayes for all she has done over the past five decades. Students who were unsure about their place in the world wrote to thank Dr. Hayes for helping to guide them toward successful futures. Fellow faculty wrote to thank her for her constant passion and unflinching support. The appreciation is palpable in each note — some handwritten, some composed via typewriter — but all offered with love and gratitude.

The big question is: what does Dr. Hayes have to say after half a century at SJC?

"I swore up and down in college that I would never teach!"

Dr. Hayes said with a laugh. "I was going to do research, and I did, after I graduated from here. I had a job at Cornell."

Thankfully for SJC, Dr. Hayes did not remain at Cornell long. It wasn't until she was exposed to the cutthroat environment of research biology that she lost her taste for the work. "In a place like Cornell, where they're doing such high-level research, you don't talk to anybody outside your lab group," she explained. "[Researchers] have to be able to get government funding and bring it into the institution, otherwise they lose their jobs. So you get very isolated. And I really didn't like that — I'm a people person, I guess. I didn't know that then."

After leaving Cornell in 1965, she heard from a former professor at SJC that a position had opened at the institution. The position was hers if she wanted it.

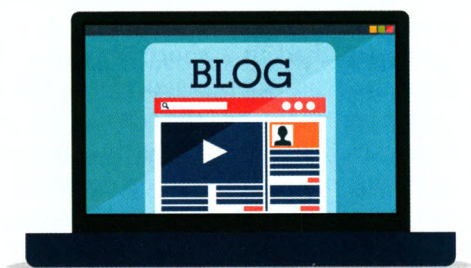

In 1965, Dr. Hayes returned to the institution where she honed her love for biology to instill that same passion into her students. And she hasn't looked back since.

"I don't feel like I've been here for 50 years," Dr. Hayes said. "I go day-to-day and I just enjoy it. People say to me, 'Are you going to retire?' I say I don't know, I enjoy what I'm doing. Why would I retire if I enjoy what I'm doing?"

What advice does Dr. Hayes have for students and faculty after 50 years at SJC?

To students: "You have to have faith in yourself. I try to encourage that in my students. If you expect very little, that's what you get — actually you get less than you expect. If you expect a great deal, you will do everything you can to come where you want to be. And I have found that throughout my entire career."

To fellow faculty: "We worry about our students when they're undergraduates — if they're doing what we want them to do. We really have to wait until they graduate. And then you see what kind of an influence you have. And they'll recognize it, too. I think this [commemorative] book is testimony to that." ■

INTRODUCING... THE PRESIDENT'S BLOG

SJC President Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D., will be sharing his insightful thoughts on a variety of topics in regular posts to The President's Blog. Coming soon!

SJC Online: An Impressive Beginning

By Cheryl Meglio

For students looking to pursue their educational goals despite increasingly busy schedules, the debut of SJC Online in July 2015 was a welcome addition to St. Joseph's College. Online classes are the best — or only — option for many as they work toward their degree. According to a recent article in Forbes, 25 percent of all college students are enrolled in online courses; 11 percent of those are exclusively online.

SJC Online is helping fill the demand for an education that doesn't solely exist at scheduled times in scheduled places. The College offers a full slate of online courses — at affordable prices — all leading to in-demand undergraduate and graduate degrees, in addition to dual degrees and certificates. To start, more than 15 degree and certificate programs were offered in six areas:

business, criminal justice, health care, human resources, general studies and human services. That list will continue to expand. "Every semester, new liberal arts and core courses are being developed to support our online programs," said Amy Poland, Ph.D., associate professor of criminal justice and associate dean for online learning. "This provides students with a rich selection of courses mirroring the many options offered on both the Long Island and Brooklyn campuses."

Prelaunch, said Charles Pendola, director and assistant professor of Graduate Management Studies, who helped spearhead the initiative, more than 40 programs, departments and functional areas met to identify all the critical elements that needed to be implemented in order for SJC Online to take shape. Pendola appreciated the team effort: "The thing that has been most gratifying is how the entire SJC community came together to successfully launch SJC Online."

Christopher J. Frost, Ph.D., senior vice president and vice president for academic affairs at SJC Long Island, agrees. "What has most pleased me about the launch of SJC Online," he explained, "is first, the sheer amount of teamwork and collaboration that was involved in getting it off the ground, and second, the shared commitment that, in extending our mission beyond the borders of our physical campus, we must ensure that our online programs are distinctive — and of the highest quality. For the near future, I see us involved in assuring that distinctiveness and quality by assessing carefully the new learning management system, Canvas, and by listening to what students are finding of highest value in our offerings, so that we can build on those elements."

For those navigating busy schedules, online courses "offer the flexibility a student may need to pursue an education," said Linda Anzalone, online program and instructional designer. "Online learning offers another great way for these students to obtain the high-quality education St. Joseph's is known for."

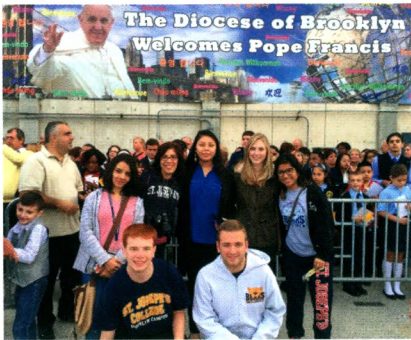

Flexibility and quality go hand in hand at SJC Online, where courses are taught by the College's own faculty and offer the same content and instruction as those offered in the traditional classroom setting. Anzalone said the students who are likely to excel in online coursework are those who are independent learners, have basic computer skills, feel comfortable in cyberspace and are proficient readers and communicators.

"In my experience," said Ashley Bender, associate director of online programs, "most people really like [online classes] and become very engaged with their courses, instructors and classmates.... SJC Online courses incorporate all kinds of creative activities and technology to ensure you're receiving the same high-quality education as students who attend our land-based campuses."

Bender is thrilled with the positive effect SJC Online has had in a short amount of time. "I am so pleased to see that we are meeting the needs of students who found online learning the best path to accomplishing their academic and professional goals," she said. "It is wonderful to have so many students already flourishing in this environment." ■

SJC Was There: Pope Francis Visits NYC

Last September, Pope Francis blessed New York City with a special visit as part of his six-day, three-city American tour. During his time in The Big Apple, the pope addressed Catholics and non-Catholics alike as he pleaded for environmental awareness and compassion for immigrants and the poor.

Students, faculty and alumni from SJC Brooklyn and SJC Long Island attended the Papal Mass at Madison Square Garden, as well as the Fifth Avenue and Central Park processions. Muriel Pless '41 even had the delight of sitting in the front row of the Pope's Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, where she sat alongside dignitaries and politicians.

Meanwhile, Michael Zwosta '16 and a group of students greeted the pope from behind the barriers along Broadway, and later attended the Papal departure on the tarmac of JFK Airport.

It was a historic moment for all of New York, and for those SJC community members who made memories for a lifetime. ■

St. Joseph's College continues to attract a diverse lineup of engaging guests to both campuses. At SJC Long Island, Mother Dolores Hart, a former actress who left behind a successful Hollywood career to become a nun, charmed the audience with stories of her life and career during a recent appearance. She recalled her first day and first scene on the set of Loving You — kissing co-star Elvis Presley — and how the director had to stop the scene to bring in the makeup man because Hart's "ears were turning red," she joked. Her other films included Where the Boys Are and Francis of Assisi. Hart became a nun at the Benedictine Abbey of Regina Laudis in Connecticut in 1963. Following the discussion, Hart warmly greeted audience members as she signed copies of her autobiography, The Ear of the Heart.

The career of African-American painter, author, mixed-media sculptor and performance artist Faith Ringgold was celebrated with events at SJC Long Island, including a book signing and documentary film presentation.

The Brooklyn Voices lecture series featured several compelling writers. Highlighting the series, which SJC Brooklyn presents in partnership with Greenlight Bookstore, were appearances by acclaimed recording artist Patti Smith and National Book Award winner for nonfiction Ta-Nehisi Coates. Both events sold out in record time. Also appearing during the series were author Jonathan Franzen, musician Kristin Hersh and "Welcome to Night Vale" NPR podcast creators Joseph Fink and Jeffrey Cranor. ■

SJC at 100: The Celebration Begins

As President Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D., welcomed the community and Janine Stange '99 belted out a glorious rendition of the national anthem, St. Joseph's College's centennial officially began. The celebration, which kicked off in October with events at SJC Brooklyn and SJC Long Island (see page 12), brought together families, alumni, faculty, staff and our students—in SJC style.

The centennial will continue through May 2017. And the Office of Institutional Advancement will continue to work with our partners on campus and beyond. Several signature events will be cornerstones of the celebration, including a revival of the Presidential Lecture series. More information on planned centennial events will be coming soon. Keep up with all the festivities at sjcny.edu/100. ■

Looking Good in Brooklyn

Already an attractive campus setting in picturesque Clinton Hill, SJC Brooklyn recently underwent a number of capital improvements that enhanced the overall appearance and function of the College. Financed by several generous gifts and grants, the renovations included:

- Transforming Tuohy Hall's old fitness center into a student lounge with space for Student Life offices and various clubs/organizations.
- Converting the former office of the Provost into several new faculty offices in Tuohy Hall.
- Relocating the Office of Campus Ministry to the previous athletics office.
- Replacing the steps and walkway from Clinton Avenue into Tuohy Hall, and the pathways between the entrance to Tuohy Hall and both Lorenzo and Burns halls.
- Creating a veterans lounge in the lower level of McEntegart Hall.

Founders Day 2015

SJC Brooklyn welcomed S. Carol Zinn, S.S.J., Ph.D., as its 2015 Founders Day speaker. S. Carol, who presented "Answering the Call to Planetary Healing," is a member of the Sisters of Saint Joseph of Philadelphia, serves on the congregation's leadership team and is the president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious (LCWR). She has had a long career in public service, working in grassroots-based international movements as a consultant and facilitator. With organizations like the United Religious Initiative and the Earth Charter, she addressed human rights, the eradication of poverty, environmental preservation, peace and disarmament. She served as the representative for the Congregations Saint Joseph — a non-governmental organization (NGO) — in general consultative status with the economic and social council of the United Nations.

S. Elizabeth A. Johnson, C.S.J., Ph.D., Distinguished Professor of Theology at Fordham University and a member of SJC's Board of Trustees, has been invited to give the Founders Day lecture later this year. ■

Capital Improvements

Student Housing Plans and Beautification Initiatives Transform SJC Long Island

As St. Joseph's College honors its past with a centennial celebration this year, it's also looking toward the future and the College's continued growth, announcing that student housing will be available at SJC Long Island by fall 2018.

Construction of the co-ed housing complex, which will be located on the site of the campus' former Gregg Alfano Athletic Field, is scheduled to begin this spring. Initial plans call for a 300-bed residential facility that will include common areas, labs, a dining hall and laundry rooms. SJC is partnering with Mosaic Capital Group, Markline Industries and Place Properties to build the residence hall, which is expected to cost between $25-$30 million.

"This is an exciting time at the College," said SJC President Jack P.

Calareso, Ph.D. "I am confident that the decision to provide student housing at SJC Long Island will not only positively impact future enrollment, but will help us continue to thrive as an exceptional institution of higher learning."

News of the residential housing complex comes on the heels of several capital improvements that were made to SJC Long Island in the past year, thanks to a number of generous gifts and grants designated for campus upgrades. Completed projects include a redesigned quad; renovated exterior and interior of the West Roe Boulevard entrance area of O'Connor Hall; a new Admissions Hospitality Center located inside the West Roe Boulevard entrance; and the conversion of an area on O'Connor Hall's third floor into a Student Success Center, providing direct services to students. ■

Outstanding Achievement

Samantha Miller poses with SJC President Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D., and his wife, Rose, at URTC in Massachusetts. Miller said that seeing the Calaresos there was one of the most memorable moments of the conference.

Mathematics and Computer Science major Samantha Miller '16 has already compiled an impressive résumé filled with prestigious honors and memorable experiences: recipient of a top scholarship awarded by Upsilon Pi Epsilon (UPE), intern alongside brilliant scientists at Brookhaven National Laboratory and president of SJC's chapter of UPE computer science honor society, to name a few. Her most recent accomplishment was presenting at the 2015 IEEE MIT Undergraduate Research Technology Conference (URTC) in Cambridge, Mass.

With all of these achievements, it's hard to believe Samantha would have switched majors after receiving a bad final grade in one of her first computer science classes, if not for some sage advice from S. Jane Fritz, assistant professor of mathematics and computer science, who encouraged her to continue on.

Since then, how has Samantha been able to successfully juggle her coursework and extracurricular activities? "Time management is a necessary skill I have developed in college," she said. ■

HELPING HANDS

SJC Reaches Out to Those in Need

By Valerie Esposito

IN RECENT YEARS, VOLUNTEERISM IN THE UNITED STATES HAS DECLINED, NOW REACHING ITS LOWEST level in decades. Last year, just 25 percent of Americans volunteered their time, with the lowest participation from the college-aged community. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, that number was much greater in years past, and the Corporation for National and Community Service reports that New York State provided less than three million volunteers last year, ranking the state 50th among the 50 states and Washington, D.C.

But the story is a different one at St. Joseph's College.

Despite the grim statistics of volunteerism in the country, SJC is proud of the strong culture of volunteering and serving others that has been at the core of a St. Joseph's education throughout the College's 100-year history. Since 1916, SJC has prepared students for lives of integrity, intellectual and spiritual values, social responsibility and service. Today, that culture is thriving with hundreds of students participating in community service and service-learning projects each semester.

"Service is more than just a concept at SJC, it is endemic to the educational experience of our students," said College President Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D. "We promise the highest-quality education that leads to professional success, and we have a clear record of achievement and accomplishments in many fields. We expect from our students a commitment to redemptive citizenship and our students and graduates embrace service, not only during their years at St. Joseph's, but as a way of life."

With more courses on both campuses including a service requirement, students are encouraged to participate in community service projects that will tie in classroom learning with firsthand experiences. The benefits of volunteering one's time and efforts are endless, and there is no doubt that SJC students are touching the lives of countless people in need.

SJC Long Island

Throughout the year, SJC Long Island students complete thousands of hours of community service through their chosen clubs and the Office of Campus Ministry. Under the direction of Patrick Tracy, director of campus ministry at SJC Long Island, students regularly participate in projects that include cooking and serving meals at two local soup kitchens; baking and delivering pumpkin pies for Thanksgiving; building homes with Habitat for Humanity; hosting the Special Olympics; and partaking in SJC's Make a Difference Day, a day of community service inspired by the national movement of the same name. In addition, Tracy often receives calls from local organizations in need of help, requests that his network of SJC volunteers are happy to help fill.

"The best part of my job is seeing students realize their

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

CONTRIBUTING TO THEIR SUCCESS

As an institution that offers one of the lowest tuition rates among private colleges in the New York metropolitan area, St. Joseph's College has long provided an affordable, quality education for its students. There's no question that many of those students would not have had the opportunity to pursue their personal and professional goals and reach their full potential if not for the generous donations of alumni, family and friends of SJC.

Two such students are SJC Long Island senior Brittany Correia '16 and sophomore Michelle Darris '18, who attends SJC Brooklyn.

Correia, a sociology major, didn't know how she'd be able to continue her education in the wake of a devastating fire that destroyed her home. But thanks to SJC's Student Emergency Fund—available to those with unexpected catastrophic needs—she's on schedule to graduate in May. Assistance from the fund, she says, "helped me get back on my feet. I wasn't sure how I was going to be able to afford my education at SJC."

The Dean's Scholarship is enabling Darris to achieve her goals as well. She traveled from her home in a small Hawaiian town after seeking out the journalism and new media studies program at SJC Brooklyn. Darris knows that her dream of becoming a journalist is within reach because of the generosity of the SJC community. "I'm blessed to be able to attend the College and experience the invaluable opportunities that otherwise wouldn't have been a reality for me," she explains.

In fact, SJC's scholarship offerings enable the College to attract and retain bright, talented students like Darris who will undoubtedly achieve success after they've completed their education at St. Joseph's College.

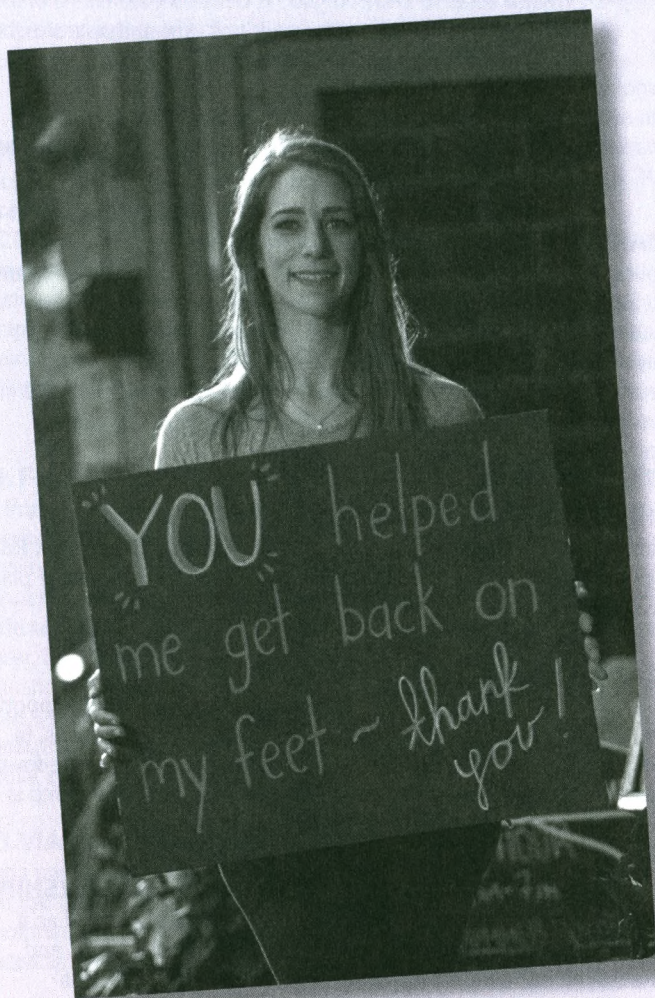

Both students feel extremely fortunate knowing that a bright future is ahead of them—due to their own hard work and determination and the financial support provided by members of the SJC community they've never even met.

"I'm thankful to be a student at SJC and to have this life-altering experience," Darris says. "I can't thank [donors] enough for making my dreams come true."

For her part, Correia has chosen not to dwell on what she lost, but rather on the unexpected support that she received. She also is grateful "every day to the generous donors and couldn't be more appreciative of their assistance during my time of need."

Members of the St. Joseph's College community have long been committed to giving back to an institution that has meant so much to them. There's no question that each gift, says SJC President Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D., makes "an immediate and lasting impact in the life of a St. Joseph's College student."

Brittany Correia and Michelle Darris couldn't agree more.

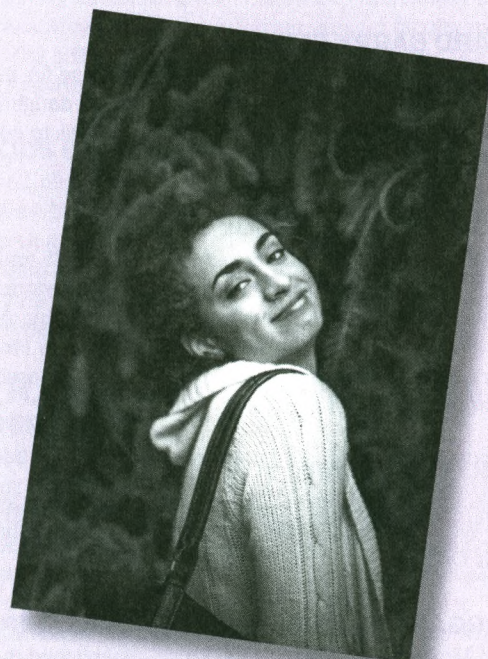

"Assistance from the fund helped me get back on my feet. I wasn't sure how I was going to be able to afford my education at SJC."

"I'm blessed to be able to attend the College and experience the invaluable opportunities that otherwise wouldn't have been a reality for me."

During his years at SJC, Gregg Alfano, an avid baseball player, held several athletic records. After Gregg's untimely death in 2000, his parents and his twin brother, Christopher Alfano '93, created a scholarship in Gregg's memory. When Christopher's wife, JoAnne Alfano, succumbed to breast cancer in 2001, her name was added to the scholarship to honor her memory. The Alfano family created the scholarship to ensure that something positive and lasting emerged from the tragic loss of their children. The scholarship is awarded to students from SJC Long Island.

DION ARROYO MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

The Dion Arroyo Memorial Scholarship was established by the brothers of Delta Psi Omega in memory of their former brother, Dion Lawrence Arroyo. Centennial Celebration Concert

"Our students and graduates embrace service, not only during their years at St. Joseph's, but as a way of life."

efforts have made an impact," said Tracy. "In my years here at the College, the number of volunteers has increased and people seem to be more seasoned in community service. Students come here wanting to make a difference or raise awareness about certain issues."

One of the larger community service projects that SJC Long Island students participate in is the annual Alternative Winter Break. Students from multiple clubs and organizations come together with SJC staff members to spend one week helping people in areas of need. This year, a group traveled to Moore, Okla., a city still reeling from the effects of a 2013 tornado that blasted the community with 210 mph winds, and left 24 people dead and 377 injured. For one week, SJC students and staff partnered with an organization called Serve Moore to help repair homes and assist with their efforts throughout the community.

The culture of service that SJC Long Island students are immersed in extends outside of the classroom and beyond. For one SJC alumnus and one graduate student, that meant creating Project9line, Inc., an organization that aims to empower veterans with reintegration through the arts and entrepreneurship.

Patrick Donohue, U.S. Army veteran and current graduate student at SJC Long Island, suffered from PTSD after returning home from Afghanistan in 2012. With the help of SJC alumnus Brian Cutaia '10, he founded Project9line, Inc., to provide venues for communication and programs, such as meditation and relaxation; writing, music, comedy and songwriting workshops; and recreational horseback riding for veterans.

"As an Army veteran, I wanted to assist my brothers and sisters in arms to continue doing what matters the most, here at home," said Donohue. "Many veterans are having trouble transitioning and we are trying to assist them in this process. Suffolk County has the second largest veteran population in the United States, and our warriors need their communities to join forces to assist in the reintegration process.”

Proof that volunteering is a two-way street, providing benefits for both those in need and those who offer assistance, Donohue added: “Giving back is the most rewarding thing in the world. Helping others actually helps me the most, and, as of lately, it helped me find a healthy balance so I can focus on other awesome life happenings as well.”

SJC Brooklyn

SJC Brooklyn students are also involved in their community, regularly participating in St. Saviour Parish’s Brown Bag Lunch Program. Through this program, SJC Brooklyn students make and distribute lunches to the homeless population of New York City while spreading warm wishes and hospitality by decorating the bags and including inspirational notes that they attach to freshly baked brownies. The many different parts of this particular project allow a large number of students to be involved and use their talents in different ways.

“Community service is an area that every student at SJC Brooklyn takes part in at some point in their career at the College,” said Michele Corsetti, coordinator of community service at SJC Brooklyn. “Community service is important because through serving others, the students get a better idea of who they are as individuals. They learn what social issues are important to them and how a small act can make a big difference in someone’s life.”

SJC Brooklyn students also had the unique experience of learning by example when they regularly volunteered at St. John’s Bread & Life with SJC’s first lady, Rose Calareso. Over the course of one year, Mrs. Calareso and the students prepared, cooked and served meals to thousands of New Yorkers in need.

“It was my impression that the students appreciated the opportunity to participate in a variety of service projects during our visits,” said Mrs. Calareso. “Some assisted with preparing food while others worked in the serving areas. There was a lot of interaction with other volunteers and the community, which created a positive sense of a shared mission. Many learning opportunities arise from visiting with people who need help at a particular time of their lives.”

For some SJC Brooklyn students, their desire to help out starts at SJC; for others, it begins before they enter the College. Kathryn Brucas ’17, Habitat for Humanity site leader and active volunteer, began volunteering in high school. While participating in SJC’s Alternative Spring Break in 2014, she developed a passion for helping people who have been affected by disasters rebuild their lives. She became an active volunteer with Habitat for Humanity and was later assigned as a site leader, directing fellow volunteers and overseeing the projects.

“Students come [to St. Joseph’s College] wanting to make a difference or raise awareness about certain issues.”

"I volunteer because it makes me feel undefeatable and creates so many memories," said Brucas. "I have built so many bonds with fellow students, faculty members, site leaders and homeowners that I will forever cherish. The hope and optimism of all these individuals remind me that my sore hands and feet, blisters, cuts and aches are temporary and are worth it at the end of a day. One day of my hard work is one day closer to a family being back in the home where they belong."

Brucas will take her passion for helping one step further, as she plans to complete one year of service with Habitat for Humanity AmeriCorps after she graduates from SJC.

Both Campuses Collaborate

Similar to SJC Long Island's Alternative Winter Break, dedicated students and staff from both campuses participate in Alternative Spring Break trips, where they spend their time off participating in various service projects in areas that were affected by natural disasters. Most recently, the group traveled to aid in recovery efforts for local communities that were still dealing with the aftermath of Superstorm Sandy. Previous trips have included building homes in Georgetown, S.C., and rebuilding homes destroyed by tornadoes in Joplin, Mo.

Students, staff, faculty and alumni from both campuses have also worked together to create and cultivate an ongoing service-learning project in Sutiaba, Nicaragua. Since 2007, 200 SJC students have successfully built homes, repaired roofs, installed washing sinks, planted fruit trees, helped form a women's craft-making cooperative and established a children's scholarship program in the country. This service-learning project is an extension of what students are taught in the classroom, allowing them to apply what they have learned throughout the semester.

"The greatest benefit of my service learning in Nicaragua was interacting with the children and seeing their faces when we arrived in the community," said Jacqueline Poppo, B.S. '15, M.S. '17. "We are people from two different worlds, but we came together and shared experiences. It taught me not to take anything for granted. There was so much strength in the connections that we made in those short nine days."

In 2009, a group of alumni formed the Nicaragua Program Alumni Group as a way to continue helping the people of Nicaragua. To date, more than 60 students in Nicaragua have been sponsored by members of the SJC community, ensuring that they can attend their local Catholic school. SJC also ensures that young children have access to preschool programs by helping to pay the teachers' salaries with the help of the Nicaraguan government. Students who

The next trip to Nicaragua takes place in January 2017.

Serving Families Closer to Home

When the holidays come around, both campuses pitch in to make Christmas special for children and families in need right here in our communities. SJC Brooklyn's Freshman Year Experience program joins forces with P.S. 65 in the Bronx to sponsor a grade and ensure that all of the school's children receive a gift. SJC Brooklyn's freshman class raises money to purchase toys for the children before wrapping and tagging each gift. The presents are then delivered to the school, fulfilling holiday wishes for every child.

Similarly, SJC Long Island sponsors local families in need and, with the help of the entire campus, provides dozens of gifts to children and adults. The presents are delivered by Santa Claus himself (known to colleagues as Pat Tracy), ensuring everyone will have a present to open on Christmas morning.

No matter the project, the spirit of service is growing at St. Joseph's College. With no signs of slowing down, students are changing the world around them, one project at a time. ■

ABOVE ALL ELSE AT ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE, THE STUDENTS ARE MOST IMPORTANT. Through changing times and alternating trends, that fact has remained constant for 100 years. By scrupulously following its own motto — Esse non videri: "To be, not to seem."— SJC has provided students with a quality education that has enabled them to succeed: To be leaders who excel in their field. To be dedicated members of their community. To be people of integrity. To be of service to those in need.

As the College celebrates its centennial, SJC President Jack P. Calareso, Ph.D., and the 11 members of the President's Council are tasked with leading SJC through new challenges and exciting opportunities, while continuing the institution's tradition of success and service. It's a commitment that Dr. Calareso doesn't take lightly, nor is he interested in keeping things status quo. "I am a great believer in continuous quality improvement," he explained, "which means that no matter how well we are doing, we should always take time to consider if there are ways we can make things better. That's our commitment to our students and we need to always remember that and never be satisfied. What I know we do very well is what I call 'holistic' education. That means we provide students with an excellent education experience inside and outside the classroom. And faculty and staff are always willing to provide students with whatever they need to improve their experience at SJC."

To assist him in leading SJC into its second century, Dr. Calareso has assembled a team in the President's Council that shares his vision of, and commitment to, excellence: Carrie Bhada, vice president for institutional advancement; Christopher Frost, Ph.D., senior vice president and vice president for academic affairs, SJC Long Island; Shantey Hill, assistant vice president and senior athletics director; Rose Mary Howell, Ed.D., vice president for student life, SJC Long Island; Gigi Lamens, vice president for enrollment management, SJC Long Island; Jessica McAleer Decatur, vice president of marketing and communications; Christine Murphy, vice president for enrollment management, SJC Brooklyn; Michelle Papajohn, vice president for information technology and chief information officer; Jill Rehmann, Ph.D., vice president for academic affairs, SJC Brooklyn; John Roth, chief financial officer; and Sherrie Van Arnam, vice president for student life, SJC Brooklyn. (Editor's Note: Dr. Rehmann will be returning to teaching full time at SJC in July.)

What most impresses Dr. Calareso about them as a group? "There are many things, but I will focus on two," he responded. "First, they are all extraordinarily talented and committed to the College's mission and Strategic Plan. The College is fortunate to have them as our leadership team. Second, they are a team. They work together creatively, with mutual respect and dedication to the success of every area of the College."

SJCNY asked Dr. Calareso and the members of the President's Council to share their thoughts about the College and what they would like to focus on this year.

What sets St. Joseph's College apart from other colleges?

Jack Calareso: To be honest, I don't think SJC is unique. There are many exceptional small, private colleges. But what impresses me is the degree of dedication expressed by everyone associated with SJC. Alumni/ae and students at other institutions may care about their college as much, but no one cares more.

Carrie Bhada: The faculty and staff's commitment to our students is unmatched.

Christopher Frost: The careful integration (or "melding") of the liberal arts, professional preparation and experiential learning—with mindful reflection on how those three components hang together ("cohere", from which we derive the noun, coherence).

Shantey Hill: Our programming and attention to detail sets us apart from other colleges. SJC doesn't just provide programs and services for the sake of doing so. I think what you find here is that we really focus on enhancing the student as a whole and making sure that we provide programs and services that are intentional to their mission. We are a college that prepares you well academically, but also ensures that when you graduate you possess transferable skills that make you a great servant leader.

Rose Mary Howell: The St. Joseph's College mission of providing a values-oriented, as well as strong, academic education, and the commitment to serving and providing opportunities for students to serve local and global communities.

Gigi Lamens: SJC fosters a forward-thinking liberal arts education by providing a permanent skill base for our students that will serve them well in our ever-changing world. The College continues to incorporate new disciplines into our liberal arts tradition that will help future-proof our students' career opportunities. Moreover, in our small college setting, we can accomplish what simply cannot be done at larger, more impersonal institutions. Our students benefit from ongoing interaction with their professors, as well as their participation in a full campus life experience that fosters engagement, community and leadership. It is understandable that SJC enjoys high retention and graduation rates. SJC is innovative in providing a curriculum that is current and relevant. The recently launched SJC Online is just another example of innovation and our goal of meeting the diverse educational needs of our students.

Jessica McAleer Decatur: St. Joseph's College is a special place. Rich in history and tradition, the College prepares its students for a life beyond the classroom. Members of the SJC community are bonded by the College's mission and dedication to social responsibility and service on the local, regional, national and global levels. We truly embody the College's motto, Esse no videri: "To be, not to seem." It's both humbling and inspiring to be a part of such an altruistic community.

Christine Murphy: SJC's legacy of success over the last 100 years is one way in which the College is distinguished from many other institutions. Another differentiator is SJC's commitment to providing an affordable education, with a tuition cost that is nearly $9,000 less than the average published tuition and fee cost at private non-profit, four-year institutions (according to the College Board's "2015-16 Trends in College Pricing"). Additionally, SJC Brooklyn is further differentiated by its beautiful historic buildings, green space on our urban campus, parking facilities for our students and our brand-new and modern Hill Center for athletics and recreation.

Michelle Papajohn: SJC is an affordable small liberal arts college that provides a highly rated education in Brooklyn and on Long Island. Technology has changed the way our students learn, the way our teachers teach and the communication that takes place between students and teachers. Our classrooms are equipped with the latest technology to foster that teaching and learning. We offer our students access to software and tools that allow for active learning, collaboration and communication.

Jill Rehmann: While many colleges have diverse student bodies, what sets us apart is how integrated our students are as they engage in their activities on campus. I usually don't even see the diversity, but instead the deep connection students have with each other as they engage in their activities.

John Roth: The small friendly atmosphere not only in the classrooms, but also in the offices, along with the many diverse programs offered to the students.

Sherrie Van Arnam: One of the values identified in the new operational plan references "our caring and compassionate community that respects individuals and seeks to promote and model leadership, diversity and mutual understanding." The College excels, or sets itself apart, when all of its constituencies embody these values.

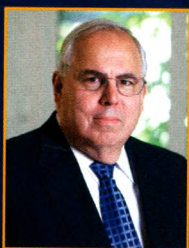

*What do you think SJC does best?
In what area(s) can it improve?*

CB: Educate! The College delivers a first-rate education. We can — and are working to — communicate and connect more with our donors and friends.

CF: At its best, it provides the same kind of educational experience that "Honors Colleges" do, but it does so for all of its students. It can improve by re-envisioning the academic programs that it provides, and extending into those areas that align with our mission.

SH: St. Joseph's is really good at putting the student first! We have great faculty, staff and administrative personnel who all want what's best for our students and will stop at nothing to create programs and initiatives to do so. An area of improvement would be to ensure that these efforts work together simultaneously and not in silos to ensure we are utilizing our resources wisely and creating sustainability.

RMH: SJC's one-on-one support for students is exemplary.

This is demonstrated in the classroom through faculty/student support and through support and mentoring provided by student life and athletic program staff.

GL: Students have always been our top priority. What SJC does best is maintain an emphasis on high-impact, cross-disciplinary learning that empowers our students to take active roles in their education and encourages them to view opportunities and challenges from different perspectives. Moreover, the learning that occurs outside the classroom through engaging campus life activities is an essential component of their development, as well as their preparation for career and for life. SJC is a community in every sense of the word.

JMD: Members of the community work toward a common goal — the greater good of the student experience. SJC provides a high-quality value education to its more than 5,000 students and has prepared more than 33,000 alumni for a life characterized by its five pillars: integrity, intellectual and spiritual values, social responsibility and service. How can we improve? Just continue to find better ways to further develop this common goal. It is at the heart of who we are and, I think, what makes us most unique.

MP: SJC is a community. Our faculty, staff and students are part of something bigger than themselves. The experiences and opportunities they have and the relationships that they develop stay with them forever. In order to improve we need to let go of some of our past and move forward into the future. This can be done while holding true to our traditions and history, but adapting to the changing world that we live in. We need to continue to expand our offerings of new and innovative programs and delivery methods — such as Hospitality and Tourism Management, Nursing and SJC Online — in order to remain competitive today.

JRe: We support students where they're at and get them to where they want to go.

JRo: I think the teaching environment with small class sizes [is what SJC does best].

Dr. Calareso has established himself as a leader who embraces change while remaining true to the history and mission of the college. In what ways has he inspired you?

CB: I'm inspired by Dr. Calareso's commitment to excellence and dynamic approach to handling the challenges we currently face. It's rewarding to work with such a thoughtful and experienced leader.

CF: As one who thinks of real education as "future proofing," as providing skill sets essential to building a career and a life, I think we are "modeling" that capacity by "future proofing" the institution itself.

SH: Dr. Calareso has done a wonderful job preserving the history of the Sisters of St. Joseph while also restructuring and advancing our College in a way that makes it sustainable for many years to come. His work has provided an energy that past, present and future classes can remain proud of, and it is this spirit that has infectiously inspired me to ensure that the athletic programs remain on par with the same.

RMH: SJC will continue to prepare college graduates for the 21st century and beyond, while providing a strong academic and values-oriented education that encourages students to develop personal value systems, responsible self-direction and participation in local and global communities.

GL: Dr. Calareso supports the values we share as a community. He fosters innovation, while holding true to the mission and traditions of the College, while at all times keeping our students as his top priority. I have been inspired by his leadership, resolve and creativity.

JMD: Dr. Calareso has moved the College forward in so many ways over the last year. Among a few of his major accomplishments, he has launched an Online Campus, kicked off a two-year centennial celebration, overseen major campus renovations and, most recently, announced that SJC Long Island will add residential housing in Patchogue — all while staying true to the mission and history of SJC.

CM: Dr. Calareso has set forth an operation plan that articulates the critical pillars for the College's success and sustainability. These pillars include a commitment to mission and values; a plan to advance the College's reputation as a leading center for higher learning; a structure that will support more efficient and strategic enrollment practices; establishment of a new office to oversee marketing and communications and enhance the College's visibility; and focused attention on fundraising and development efforts to help fund scholarships and facilities for our students.

Having this relevant and comprehensive plan clearly articulated has allowed me — as a division and campus leader — to contribute in thoughtful, relevant and strategic ways. Within the Office of Enrollment Management at SJC Brooklyn, we have established an operational plan for the division, which has been inspired by and runs parallel to the master operational plan. The master operational plan helps to ensure that all campus leaders and stakeholders are working collaboratively and toward the same end goals.

MP: It challenges you to not be complacent, and makes you think more deeply about what we historically do well, as well as areas that we can improve upon. You start to see that with change comes opportunity to make things better. Sometimes those opportunities are within the scope of one department, and other times you discover that there is something that benefits the entire college. It feels very satisfying to be a part of such positive change.

JRo: Dr. Calareso has confronted our institutional challenges with transparency and honesty, engaging the College faculty and staff members in a community effort to make our offices efficient and our programs strong. There is no denying that change moves us out of our comfort zone, but I think that most of us, if we reflect on our own experience, know that we learn and grow most when we are pushed beyond business as usual. The president has demonstrated resolve in taking us to a new place and the College is stronger for it.

JRo: Dr. Calareso has brought a wealth of experience to SJC. His enthusiasm and wisdom have inspired me to be even more passionate about my work.

SVA: Dr. Calareso's vision for the future of the College has been clearly articulated. As someone who has been a member of the SJC staff for many years, the legacy of the Sisters of St. Joseph and the values of this institution are central to my commitment as a member of the leadership team. Inspiration comes from the shared resolve of many people who are working to ensure the future of St. Joseph's College.

The founders of SJC had their vision for the College and what they wanted it to offer students. What do you think would most impress them about SJC today?

JC: While much has changed due to the culture and times, I think the founders would say in one voice that this is the College they founded, these are the students they wanted to serve, these are the values they espoused and this is the educational quality they expected.

CB: Our alumni are our greatest success and the founders would be proud of how the College grew and maintained the commitment to excellence, while honoring the traditions on which it was built.

CF: The breadth of its academic offerings, which exist while adhering to the depth of learning as originally envisioned.

GL: SJC holds true to its mission fostering respect and civility, a passion for a life of learning and discovery, personal integrity and compassion and an ethic for work and service. I believe the founders would be impressed that SJC has so significantly grown while holding true to our mission.

JMD: I think they would be most impressed by the fact that, after nearly 100 years, this institution has stayed true to its mission and continues to embrace the unique culture of two diverse campus populations, while celebrating the College's rich history. SJC is a co-educational liberal arts institution rooted in the Catholic tradition. I think that the founders would be pleased with the way in which we honor this tradition and the Sisters of St. Joseph, who dedicated (many of which still continue to do) their life to serving this fine institution.

MP: I think the founders of SJC would be impressed with how much the school has grown over the past 100 years, while we continue to instill the same tradition and values.

JRe: We continue to be an inviting and accessible community for underserved students. We began as an institution that served primarily immigrant Catholic women, and we continue to reach out to those who are new to this country through our ACES program. In addition to students from other countries, we have many first-generation students who might get lost in the crowd at a larger, less hands-on institution. I believe our founders would be gratified to know that this aspect of their mission is alive and well.

JRo: The look and the feel of the facilities, as well as the technology.

SVA: I think that the founders would be gratified by the caliber of SJC's programs and services, and by our steadfast commitment to enrolling future generations of students who will receive an excellent education rooted in the same values on which the College was established. ■

Enjoying the JOURNEY

Profile of SJC Brooklyn's Charles Byrd '17 and a Look Back at Veterans Week

By David Henne

Twenty-year Army veteran Charles Byrd '17 is a self-described simple man. "I never wanted to be a CEO," he said. "I'm a worker. I like to work behind the scenes. I like to be one of those foot soldiers — because that's what veterans are."

Like many military veterans, Byrd served his country abroad before returning stateside without a clear path set before him. Thankfully, in 2014, SJC Brooklyn Assistant Dean Angela Diaz introduced herself and St. Joseph's College.

Now, Byrd is majoring in Organizational Management with a minor in Marketing and, for the first time in a long time, he's back in the classroom. He also serves as president of SJC's U.S. Veterans and Armed Forces Society.

"Angela Diaz has been a tremendous help for me, being that I haven't been to school in about 20 years," Byrd said. "I'm getting familiar with the campus, all the things they make available for veterans and persons in professional fields. I told them I would recommend everybody to St. Joe's."

Byrd was on-site last year at Fort Wadsworth on Staten Island — a satellite location for military personnel and veterans to take higher education classes — when Diaz visited to explain about the opportunities and benefits available at SJC. Byrd heeded the call, and is glad he did.

"The way [Diaz] presented the school — I said, 'I need that,'" Byrd explained. "I went to CUNY, and the classrooms were too large. The classes here are very small, especially the evening classes, and it made it convenient for me to be able to take classes in the evening so I could focus on my academic work more than in the daytime."

For SJC military and veteran students, such as Byrd, the timing to enroll has never been better. As part of the College's participation in the Post-9/11 GI Bill Yellow Ribbon Program, financial support for education and housing is offered to military veterans with at least 90 days of aggregate service on or after September 11, 2001, or individuals discharged with a service-connected disability after 30 days.

There's an infectious smile worn by Charles Byrd. He's satisfied with the treatment he's been given as a veteran student of St. Joseph's College. "I've been all over the world. Been to Turkey, Panama, Hawaii. I did a few short tours in Korea. I wish I didn't have to retire from the military, but it came to a point when my body was falling apart, so I had to make a choice."

Celebrating Our Heroes

When it comes to assisting military personnel, St. Joseph's College excels. As Byrd attests, SJC offers a generous tuition rate, not only to servicemembers (active duty, guard and reserve), but also to dependents and spouses of active-duty servicemembers.

Veterans and military are a valued population, especially at SJC. The New York metropolitan area contains the largest number of returning troops in the country — men and women looking to transition into new lives, new careers and new education. That's precisely what drew new Director of the Office of Military and Veteran Services Erin D'Eletto to the institution.

"Within this community exists countless and committed individuals who are dedicated to the betterment of our veterans and their families," D'Eletto said. "Together with the SJC community, our office will fulfill its primary goal of promoting the education of our nation's veterans, enhancing the retention of our current military and veteran students, and supporting their success beyond the halls of SJC."

It's not just the quality education that stands out at SJC. The College hosts regular events specifically designed to engage military members. From networking opportunities focusing on potential career tracks to veterans' celebrations, SJC ensures its military family is always a priority.

In keeping with its mission to assist servicemembers in and out of the classroom, SJC Long Island held its annual Veterans Career Fair and Expo last October, run through the office of Suffolk County Executive Steve Bellone.

D'Eletto explained it was "a county and SJC team effort that, according to the county, saw their highest participation to date with approximately 125 public and private employers engaging with the almost 150 military and veterans that attended the event. This is an invaluable and collaborative community event that provides our veterans with potential immediate and future employment opportunities and that demonstrates a cohesive and comprehensive message to our veterans — 'we are here for you.'"

The expo served as an introduction of sorts to SJC's 2015 Veterans Awareness Week, which ran from November 9-12, featuring a military generations panel of veterans from all eras, as well as a "Life of a Soldier" immersive experience — where students were given a chance to explore military gear, eat MREs (meals ready-to-eat) and speak to active soldiers about their experience. The week also saw the opening of a new Veterans Lounge in SJC Brooklyn's McEntegart Hall.

The culmination of the week on both campuses is always the annual Veterans Day Ceremony. At SJC Brooklyn, guest speaker Byrd saluted the audience in the Tuohy Hall Lounge and spoke of the ongoing battles fought by veterans after returning home. "A lot of veterans feel shortchanged when they come back and they have to go through the hassle and the struggle of trying to get into school," he said. "Being that I've been out of school for a while, SJC has the right speed, it has the convenience. I've been enjoying the journey."

At SJC Long Island, the Veterans Day Ceremony was equally emotional. Maria Wiener, surviving spouse of HM2 Jeffrey Wiener, U.S. Navy, spoke about moving on after a devastating loss, a reminder of how much families of military personnel sacrifice and how important it is to support them. U.S. Army veteran and current SJC Long Island graduate student Patrick Donohue spoke candidly about suffering from PTSD after returning from Afghanistan in 2012.

A day earlier, students at the Life of a Soldier event had the opportunity to experience a closer view of military life, from sampling the food ("Surprisingly not bad," admitted one) to trying on a fully loaded backpack ("I might fall over," said another).

"Quite often, I have reflected on what consistently motivates me to work with the active military, veterans and their families," D'Eletto said. "Inherently, I place a high value on advocacy. Professionally, there is nothing more satisfying to me than serving others and making a difference in people's lives and there is no higher honor than serving those that have served." ■

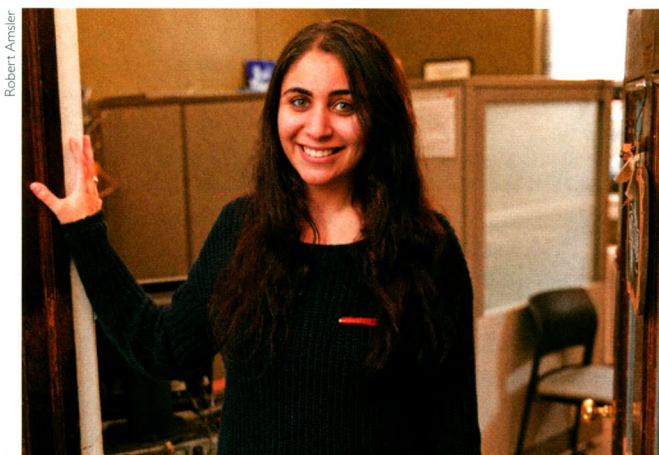

Honoring soldiers, past and present.

A Passion for Politics

The United Nations' Newest Star, Jasmine Elshear '16

By David Henne

Jasmine Elshear

It's a facet of SJC Brooklyn that has lasted 100 years: Each graduating class boasts some of the brightest and hardest working young people in the country. Students who are unquestionably destined for success.

This spring's graduating class will be no different, thanks in large part to Jasmine Elshear '16. Currently battling hard to preserve her 4.0 GPA, Jasmine complemented her studies at SJC with internship opportunities at the United Nations in New York and within her native Egypt.

During her time with the UN, Jasmine participated in the World Humanitarian Day in Cairo and worked on the youth platform for the World Humanitarian Summit this May in Turkey. Now six months removed from her latest internship, Jasmine still is sought after by the UN to assist as an on-call worker for high-profile events.

"Actually, this time it's paid, so that's a good thing," Jasmine said. "I'm helping out with the EAT Forum, which is an event on sustainable nutrition. It's a really high-level event — they had Bill Clinton speak. Yesterday, I was doing the invitations going out to heads of state and ambassadors."

One of those on the guest list was Egyptian President Abdel Fattah Saeed Hussein Khalil el-Sisi. "My mother told me to include a personal note to him," Jasmine said. "I didn't think I should."

It's not an unreasonable request, considering how intimate Jasmine is with the political landscape of Egypt. In 2013, she left her home in Queens to return to Egypt during a time of political upheaval to take part in the countrywide revolution and protests. It was then that she found her passion for political science.

"In 2013, [Egypt] had a revolution against the Muslim Brotherhood. That's the one I took part in," Jasmine says. "My family lives in Alexandria, and that's where it was all going on. We had protests all over Egypt. When I came back, I decided to do political science at St. Joseph's."

Jasmine's arrival at SJC wasn't quite as illustrious as her international travels. Before she was protesting and posting invitations to presidents, Jasmine transferred to SJC Brooklyn from NYIT on a teacher's recommendation.

"I came to an SJC open house and I liked the school because it was intimate," Jasmine said. "Then, I met all these amazing professors, such as Professor [Kenneth] Bauzon and Professor [Raymond] D'Angelo — my adviser — and Professor [Christopher] Dekki."

Thankfully for Jasmine, the social sciences faculty at SJC was available to take full advantage of her unique story and experiences, helping her obtain the elite internship opportunities at the UN and flourish in and out of the classroom. "Through Professor Dekki," she said, "I was able to get my first internship at the UNGLS: Non-Governmental Liaison Services in New York, and through connections at the first internship, I was able to get the second one [UN OCHA: Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs] in Cairo."

Jasmine's options have multiplied with the completion of her UN internship study. She credited these life-changing opportunities to the hard work of Professor Dekki. "He's a magnificent professor, and he's very caring to students," she said. "If you hold on to the opportunity that he gives you, you can get great things out of it."

And Professor Dekki emphasizes the value of students like Jasmine. "She has managed to impress people at all levels of the United Nations System all over the world," Dekki said, "from representatives of UN agencies that work on stakeholder engagement to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. She is not only smart and talented, but also totally dedicated to the work she has been doing with me at the UN."

Jasmine recently obtained a part-time job at the Global Policy Forum, a UN watchdog. But it's the academic challenges of the classroom she loves most. "After graduation I want to get my master's in International Relations and Human Rights," she said. "My ultimate plan is to become a professor, earn my Ph.D. I'd like to do international work. I'd like to move back to Egypt once I'm done with my master's." ■

Noelle Eichenlaub '17 Recalls Her Disney Days

By Cheryl Meglio

Noelle Eichenlaub

part in an internship with the prestigious Disney College Program. Working for several months as a Fairy Godmother in training in the Bibbidi Bobbidi Boutique was an experience the St. James resident won't soon forget.

A child study/speech double major at SJC Long Island, Noelle long had her sights set on the internship. She called the process to apply "stressful. Many students don't get past the initial application." Once an application is approved, candidates are required to undergo a web-based interview, followed by a phone interview. Only about 10 percent of initial applicants make it that far.

"I was lucky to have several Disney College Program alumni give me advice and support throughout the process," Noelle said. "And I worked with S. Suzanne Franck from the Academic Advisement Center. I hope to encourage students to consider the program and the incredible impact that it can have on your life and career."

For someone who always knew she wanted to be a teacher and was "playing school" before she ever entered a classroom, the internship provided valuable lessons. "My leaders stressed the importance of recognizing that everyone has a story," she said. "We may not know the story at first, but a person's background has such an effect on how they react and respond to different situations.... As a teacher, this is so important to recognize. [It's] something I will carry with me throughout my teaching career."

Noelle's decision to attend St. Joseph's College wasn't a difficult one to make. "SJC," she explained, "was the only school that allowed me to attain every certification

I wanted, and the College is so highly respected in the field of education. How could I go anywhere else for my undergraduate career?" In the future, she hopes to focus on incorporating arts-based approaches in all subject fields, especially in special education classrooms.

One of the best aspects of attending SJC, Noelle said, is that it feels like home.

"Even though St. Joseph's is a commuter campus, there is such a great community," she said. "I love walking through the halls because there is always a smiling face that will brighten up my day."

When she's not in class, Noelle can be found studying at home alongside her puppies Molly and Andy ("For moral support!"), picking out projects at craft stores and performing in Long Island community theater productions. In whatever she does, Noelle hopes that people see her as "someone who is kind and caring." Looking ahead, she intends to follow the best advice she ever received: "Live in the now, but think in the future.... This has really helped me in life, especially when times are tough because I know my hard work will pay off eventually."

Hard work with a little magic thrown in. ■

Cap, gown and mouse ears: graduation day at Disney College.

On the Path to Success

By Cheryl Meglio

When Charles Essig '11 was deciding where to attend college, he didn't need to look very far. Although he initially wasn't too intrigued about staying local, the Medford native admits he knew a good thing when he saw it. "I won't necessarily call it a last-minute decision," he admitted, "but St. Joseph's College just ended up being the most enticing package in the end. It had studies I wanted to get into, along with the golf program."

It was golf coach George Canger, in fact, who gave Essig a tour of SJC Long Island. Essig came away impressed with the College and the coach. "He basically mentored me throughout my time at the school, not only in the golf setting, but also academically," said Essig, who played on the team all four years and was named captain his senior year. He was also student government president.

Following his graduation from SJC, Essig, who majored in mathematics with a concentration in education, accepted a job offer at Manhattan law firm Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz, where he worked for four years before deciding to continue his education. Last fall, he began the two-year M.B.A. program in mathematics and business administration at the prestigious NYU Stern Business School. Essig will have a full load for the next four semesters, including an internship at a to-be-determined company next summer.

"SJC gave me the approach to always look at things from a holistic standpoint."

Providing him — and others — with the opportunity to succeed is something that can also be said of St. Joseph's College. Essig thoroughly enjoyed his time at SJC Long Island and believes that what he learned at the College — both in and out of the classroom — will continue to serve him well in every aspect of his life and career. "[The faculty and staff at] St. Joseph's College are very good at what they do and they turn out successful individuals," he explained. "I think SJC gave me the approach to always look at things from a holistic standpoint, as opposed to being very niche-based and narrow-minded. They do a really good job of shaping the individual as a whole. They try to get everyone involved. And not only involved in the academic setting, but also in the athletic setting and in a multicultural setting and in the campus life that allows the individual to be well rounded. It gives everyone a personality. When you have that well-rounded background, you can pretty much take on anything and move full steam ahead." ■
